Convolutional neural networks

The diagram illustrates the flow of data through a CNN. It starts with an INPUT image of a handwritten digit '2' (size 28x28x1). This is processed through three convolutional layers: Conv_1 (5x5 kernel, valid padding, resulting in n1 channels of size 24x24x1), Conv_2 (5x5 kernel, valid padding, resulting in n1 channels of size 12x12x1), and Conv_3 (5x5 kernel, valid padding, resulting in n2 channels of size 8x8x2). Max-pooling (2x2) is applied between layers. The final output is processed by Fully-Connected Neural Network layers (Fc_3 and Fc_4) with ReLU activation, leading to an OUTPUT of 10 units (0-9). Labels indicate that early layers detect 'Edges and simple features', while later layers detect 'Complex, difficult to interpret features'.
